U. S. WARSHIPS ATTACK MARSHALL ISLANDS

The War Today...

By DeWitt MacKenzie
AP War Analyst

HITLER'S speech yesterday, on the 11th anniversary of Nazi rule, was one of the strange developments of the war, for it was in its essence the desperate cry of a beaten and terrified man for aid from the Anglo-American Allies to save him from the vengeance of the Red armies.

Success of his scheme, of course, would mean the causing of a rupture between the Big Three and in an effort to put his appeal across he once more prophesied dire things from Bolshevism. America and England, he warned, were menaced.

From this fight (the European struggle) there can emerge only one victor and this will be either Germany or Soviet Russia," he declared. "German victory means preservation of Europe, and a Soviet victory Europe's annihilation."

Britain, he said, already had lost her position on the continent. Then he dropped his block-buster, which he hoped would create panic among the Anglo-American peoples:

The question confronting both England and the United States hence no longer is whether they want or are able after this war to fight Bolshevism but whether they will be able to defend themselves against Bolshevism in their own countries.

That was, I take it, more than an attempt to sow discord among the Big Three. In effect it suggested German-British-American collaboration to smash the Soviet Ally. The master gangster has reached the point where he undoubtedly would make any sort of bargain with the Anglo-Americans in order to defeat the Russians. Short of that preposterous suggestion, any kind of split among the Allies would give the wavering Reich a shot in the arm.

Hitler is scared, and with reason. Even as he spoke, American war planes were dumping an awful freight of destruction on the air-plant factories of Brunswick and the great rail center of Hanover. And the Royal Air Force gave the Fuehrer his direct answer last night when a great fleet of heavy bombers again attacked stricken Berlin.

To emphasize the Allied determination to destroy this capital of the most evil government the modern world has known—barring the Japanese.

DURING these assaults the Allies shot down 91 of Hitler's precious war planes, and the Anglo-American air forces in Italy destroyed some 63 more. Thus again was demonstrated the aerial superiority which is blazing the way to the destruction of Nazism.

Meanwhile the Red army which the Fuehrer fears so much continued to roll into his battle line and move steadily forward towards the borders of the Reich over the bodies of countless German youth. In the northern Leningrad sector the Muscovites were less than a score of miles from the Estonian frontier, threatening to trap a large retreating Nazi force. own the Ukraine the Red armies were counter-attacking defensively in an effort to save their right wing from being surrounded and destroyed.

Annihilation continued to be the Red slogan. As I pointed out recently, apparently few prisoners are being taken. It's war to the death.

JAPS TO FIND PEACE TERMS MORE SEVERE

Atrocities Stories Harden U. S. Plans for Enemy At End of War

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—The American government's determination to impose a just but pitiless peace on Japan has been strengthened and hardened by the enemy's ruthless treatment of prisoners, it was learned today, and some ranking authorities are advocating a three-point program to strip the Japanese of their economic ability ever to make war again.

The main points of this program are:

1. Deprive the Japanese of all heavy industries which can be readily converted to munitions production.
2. Permit them to operate no merchant marine or commercial air fleets and to possess no ships larger than 1,000 tons capacity. This would limit their seafaring activities to fishing and small-scale trading.
3. Allow them to engage fully in farming necessary to support their population.

Punishment Planned

Post-war measures on which the United States has already agreed with its Allies in the Pacific and Asia are to strip the Japs of their empire built up through half a century of aggression and to punish war criminals such as those military officials responsible for atrocities.

In addition there is belief in naval circles that the United States should control the Bonin islands or islands in that area for naval base use so long as this country is committed to help maintain the peace in that part of the world. The Bonins lie in a chain running south from Japan to Guam.

Military men stressed that the war in the Pacific still has a long way to go. Yet they feel as the American people learn more of the nature of the enemy they should also give consideration to treatment of that enemy when he is defeated.

Release of information on the Philippine atrocities was but one step in giving out factual, documented stories of the suffering the Japanese have caused among helpless peoples. The stories are coming out in volume now largely because most experts on Japan within the government finally agreed the situation of Japanese prisoners is so bad it could hardly be worse and might eventually be improved by the force of outraged public opinion.

Any peace short of unconditional surrender, American leaders fear, will leave Nippon in position to re-arm and strike again.

Mrs. E. E. Bonsall, Mrs. Otis Rhodes, Mrs. Herbert Paulin and Mrs. Lester Burton.

Mrs. Harvey Bates and Miss Laura Hopkins were named on the flower committee. The project committee is composed of the master, the lecturer and the chairman of the home economics committee.

Young People's Rally

McConnell, chairwoman of the Ohio State grange home economics committee, announced that two statewide contests will be carried in this year, a cookie baking contest, and a "New from old" contest, sponsored by the National grange, with a series of prizes for articles made from discarded men's shirts.

Wednesday evening, Feb. 9, a Mahoning county project meeting will be held at Goshen grange hall, in charge of the chairwoman, Mrs. J. S. Hollinger.

Ohio Pen Population Is Lowest Since 1923

COLUMBUS, Jan. 31.—Warden Frank D. Henderson of Ohio penitentiary said today the institution's population had fallen to 3439 inmates, lowest since 1923.

The warden attributed the drop to the rise in employment and the fact most young men are in the armed services.

The 1923 prison population was 2890. The highest was 4700 in 1930.

FLEE BALTICS AS REDS NEAR

German Colonists Joining Troops In Retreat Before Russian Army

(By Associated Press)

LONDON, Jan. 31.—German colonists were reported fleeing from the Baltic states today as the Red army which yesterday swept up 50 more towns and hamlets between the gulf of Finland and Lake Peipus, raced toward Kingisepp, last rail station short of the Estonian frontier on the line to Narva.

Gen. Leonid A. Govorov's Leningrad army lunged to within 7½ miles of Kingisepp with capture of the rail junction of Veimarn, only 17 miles from the Estonian border, a Soviet communique announced. The village of Kiti, 16 miles above Veimarn also was taken.

The Moscow radio said German colonists were fleeing with retreating Nazi troops.

In the Lake Ilmen sector 60 miles to the south, another Red army was driving toward the Leningrad-Pskov railway, after seizing Velosko Solo, 17 miles southeast of Luga. Other Soviet units menaced Batetskaya, from where a spur line runs to Luga, 18 miles to the west.

In the Novosokolniki area still farther south, Gen. Markian M. Popov's second Baltic army was reported to have driven to within less than 60 miles of Latvia. Moscow said more than 2,000 Germans were killed in the fighting for Novosokolniki, which fell Saturday.

Members of the Salem Players club, whose second theatrical production, "Room Service," will be presented in the High school auditorium Feb. 16 and 17, are thoroughly enjoying their zany antics during rehearsals which are well underway.

Only one or two minor characters might be classed as "straight" with the remainder more than slightly on the comic side, so that the unending string of laughs to be provided will be shared equally among the various roles.

State Grange Head Claims Farm Youths Lack Medical Care

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, Jan. 31.—Low income, long hours with hard work, and lack of adequate medical care were advanced today by Joseph Fichter, master of the Ohio State grange, as reasons for farm youths' having comparatively poorer health than their city cousins.

His explanation was in comment on an article by Col. Leonard G. Rowntree in the Journal of the American Medical association reporting rejections of 18 and 19 year old farm workers for military service were 62 per cent above the average for other registrants and higher than for any other major occupational group.

Fichter declared "the open country with its pure air, its sunlight and its good food should be a most healthful place in which to live. However, the low income which farmers have received during the last 25 years has meant that farm life has been a life of long hours and strenuous work with little time for recreation.

"There is no doubt that this situation has had a harmful effect on the health of farm children.

"Although farm income now is higher than it has been for several years, farmers received only nine per cent of the total national income in 1943." Farmers, he said, constitute about 25 per cent of our population.

He termed as "to the point" a suggestion that extensions of public health facilities should be made.

Defects which caused the greatest number of rejections in the 18 and 19-year-old group were bad vision, lack of mental balance, muscular or bone abnormalities, heart diseases, hearing deficiencies and hernia. It was reported by Dr. A. R. Mangus, Ohio State university, rural sociologist.

Briefly, the story deals with a poverty-harassed group of Broadway theatrical people attempting to produce a play while stuck in a small hotel room from which they face momentary eviction because of non-payment of rent. How they are able to avoid eviction through the use of every device known to zany chislers and finally succeeded in getting their play on without a cent of cash proves interesting from start to finish.

The cast is made up of the following:

Robert Snyder as Sasha Smirnoff, a Russian waiter with theatrical ambitions; Franklin Smith as Gordon Miller, a producer with a plenty of brass but no silver; William F. Ross as Joseph Gribble, a hotel manager who can't even collect his wits, much less his bills; Walter B. Null, II, as Harry Binion, a director with nothing left to hock but a moochehead; William Boden-dorfer as Foker Englund, possessor of one moth-eaten fur coat; Ann McIntyre as Christine Marlowe, a stenographer who is to star in Miller's play if he ever gets it staged; Elwood Hammel as Leo Davis, an unsuspecting author with the means.

RAF HAMMERS BERLIN ANEW; RAID FRANCE

Nazi Capital, Three Other German Industrial Cities Are Left Burning

(By Associated Press)

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Hundreds of RAF bombers smashed at Berlin again last night with a holocaust of fire and explosives in history's greatest sustained aerial offensive, which left the Nazi capital and three other great industrial cities aflame and heaped with rubble.

It was the third terrific blow in four nights upon Berlin, and Mosquito bombers darted in after the heavy bombers to add to the spreading ruin.

U. S. Liberators carried the blistering assaults into the fifth day with a bomb rain on anti-invasion installations in the Pas-De-Calais area of France today.

In 48 hours ending Sunday, American heavy bombers operating from England and Italy poured more than 3,900 tons of explosives on the Nazi war machine, U. S. army headquarters disclosed.

An ominous silence fell over all Germany in the wake of four days of night-and-day bombings, including powerful American raids Sunday on Brunswick and Hannover and a record U. S. bomber blow at Frankfurt Saturday.

Great Damage Reported

Communications between Sweden and Berlin, broken Sunday, were not restored until midday today, and the first dispatch reaching Stockholm said last night's attack caused "great damage."

This Germany today began her 12th year under Nazi rule with the homeland strewn with debris and death.

Night raiders stabbed at other objectives in central and western Germany. The entire night's work which also included mine-laying operations, cost the RAF 33 planes—the smallest loss in the last four Berlin attacks.

The first British announcement on last night's Berlin raid failed to give the tonnage dropped but it likely was at least 1,500 long tons, about average for the heavy assaults since the battle of Berlin began last Nov. 18.

That would mean approximately 21,000 long tons of bombs have cascaded on the city in an actual bombing time of less than 10 hours.

Confer Again On New Tax Proposal

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—In a let's-face-it mood, senate and house conferees on the $2,315,800,000 new tax bill attempted to adjust remaining differences today in time to put a long string of wartime purchase taxes in effect on March 1.

Excise tax increases, accounting for more than $1,000,000,000 of the anticipated new revenue, become effective on the first day of the first month which begins more than 10 days after enactment of the tax bill.

Unless unforeseen delays occur, beginning March 1 the federal tax on liquor will rise from $6 a gallon to $9, furs, jewelry, cosmetics and luggage will be subject to a 20 per cent levy, and charges at night clubs and cabarets to a 30 per cent tax.

Telephone and telegraph service, admissions to movies and other amusement places, club dues, wines, beers and other articles and services also would be taxed heavier.

Those sections of the bill already have been agreed upon, along with increased postal rates, higher corporate excess profits rates expected to yield $502,700,000, and changes in the individual income tax law estimated to add $664,900,000.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Civilians will receive about one half-pound less butter per capita this year than last under the War Food Administration allocation for 1944.

This year's per capita supply of 121 pounds compares with a 1935-39 average of 16.8 pounds and with 16 pounds in both 1941 and 1942.

Fierce Fight Is Reported By Japanese

By The Associated Press

Tokyo radio reported today "fierce fighting is now going on in the mid-Pacific Marshall islands, which have been bombed and shelled by American warships from perhaps the greatest naval force ever thrown into action.

Simultaneously the Navy department announced United States submarines had sunk 14 more Japanese warships, including three transports.

Tokyo's broadcast asserted "Japanese army and navy units have intercepted powerful enemy units which have been attacking the Marshall group since the morning of Jan. 30." This may have referred only to air action against assaulting American task forces, but suggested an invasion by American amphibious forces might be under way.

Latest announcement from the United States command was of a naval attack yesterday.

It was the second consecutive day of assault by ships and planes on the Central Pacific islands the Japs have had 25 years to fortify. Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific fleet commander, in a communique from Pearl Harbor, said last night surface forces, probably battle-ships, cruisers and destroyers, moved within 10 to 20 miles of the Atolls to pound installations with thousands of shells.

Also Bombed By Planes

Carrier-based planes dropped tons of bomb on the islands, holding immobile Japanese air strength that might otherwise have been used to make trouble for our air and sea operations.

A Tokyo broadcast beamed to North America asserted "Japanese army and navy units have intercepted powerful enemy units which have been attacking the Marshall group since the morning of Jan. 30 and fierce fighting is now going on."

Things aren't going so well for the Nipponese on other fronts. Friday American planes continue their persistent attacks on Rabaul, one-time powerful Japanese stronghold on New Britain, and based at least 30 and more likely 62 enemy planes. Thirty of 70 Nipponese interceptors were certain kills and 12 were probables. On the ground 20 more enemy planes were caught like "sitting ducks" and added to the "probable" toll. Our losses were five fighters and a medium bomber.

The Japanese had their worst month of the war in the air in January, losing at least 546 planes and probably 717 against our loss of 68.

Today's communique from General Douglas MacArthur reported naval bombardment of Jap targets on Bougainville in the Solomons as well as dive bombing attacks on enemy positions holding up the Allied drive. On Madang, New Guinea, a convoy was caught off the northwest tip of New Ireland by a reconnaissance plane which left two ships burning.

1944 FARMERS WEEK IS RADIO AFFAIR

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, Jan. 31.—Ohio State university's annual Farmers' week opened today and for the first time in its history was conducted by radio.

War-time travel restrictions and labor shortages that made it impossible for many farmers to come here brought the decision to conduct the annual event as an "arm chair" affair.

Experts on food production, farm problems, home economics are scheduled to appear before the WASU station microphone in a series of lectures that continue through Friday.

Gov. John W. Bricker is to discuss the state and the war. President Howard L. Bevis of the university will speak on the school's place in war effort as a highlight of tomorrow's program.

Thursday's session will be devoted to lectures on health and poultry raising. The 1944 food outlook will be forecast Friday by J. I. Falconer of Ohio State's department of rural economics.

RAGE AND COMPASSION

Americans automatically are moved to hot rage by the government's latest disclosure of Japanese atrocities; that is one of the reasons why the disclosure is made now, instead of earlier or later. The government apparently thinks it will produce its maximum effect now.

Aside from the handling of the timing problem involved, the disclosure may be taken at face value as an honest representation of the conditions under which prisoners from Bataan and Corregidor have lived and died since they were captured. There is apparently nothing to be gained by "saving face" any longer for Japan in the policy of bestiality it deliberately followed. If the revelations have any effect at all on Japan, it may be to stimulate desire to prove that it wants to do better, since it could not possibly do worse.

The effect on the United States does not stop at mere rage. Rage is followed by compassion for those who have suffered most and, in the wider sphere, for the great nation whose dignity could be affronted with impunity in the western Pacific. Americans still are painfully aware of how much remains to be done before they can prove that the Japanese are not going to get away with their arrogant cruelty. The men on Bataan and in Corregidor waited a long time for the help that didn't come. The survivors must still be patient.

It is unfortunate that the newest disclosure of Japanese atrocities against military prisoners cannot be accompanied by the factual announcement that preparations for the invasion of Japan are well advanced. Our rage and compassion would seem less futile if they could be accompanied by conviction of imminent and decisive action to set the score straight in the Pacific. The American people need no special incentive to remember that they were taken into this war by a Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor; that Japan is the enemy they hold most against; that circumstances so far have made it impossible to deal with Japan as it richly deserves.

ONE MONTH GONE

At the end of the first month of 1944, Rome is being approached by land, but the approach to Berlin and Tokyo still is barred.

Berlin is reported virtually destroyed by aerial bombing. In Europe, the focus of important forthcoming action, the Allies have placed the enemy at a disadvantage in Italy south of Rome by a successful landing behind his lines. Russia continues to advance. German air power is weak in Italy, insufficient in Russia and not strong enough in defense of Germany, itself, to keep British and United States bomber fleets from carrying out all reasonable missions.

The greatest concentration of military power ever conceived is being developed on Great Britain as a base against Germany in Europe. The situation in the Atlantic is sufficiently improved, despite the coming invasion, to justify a British announcement that it has spared battle units for use against Japan in the Pacific. Germany's token navy has all but been destroyed, with the exception of its submarines, which are counter-balanced by Allied naval power, still increasing.

The aerial barrage of the "invasion coast" from the river Elbe southward to Brest continues on what amounts to a daily schedule, with groups of specialized planes performing what could not be duplicated by massing all available artillery pieces within medium range. While reports from inside the continent continue meager, common sense justifies conviction that the Germans and their dependents are no less impervious to suspense than were the British and the French four years ago when they knew in January that something would happen somewhere eventually, but were unable to know where to face the showdown.

WHO'S NEUTRAL?

Spain's official claim of neutrality at last is being disallowed by the United States and Great Britain. Spain has not behaved as a neutral in fact and has had only a tenuous claim to neutrality in international law. By word and deed, its government has played closer to Germany than to the enemies of Germany. The climax of its thin-ice skating apparently was the completion of an agreement with Germany providing about $40,000,000 credit to that government as payment for debts incurred during the Spanish civil war. This move precipitated an order to impose economic sanctions affecting further shipments of petroleum products to Spain from Caribbean sources.

Like Argentina, whose neutrality has made a talking point, Spain now is being forced to a showdown. If it is for the Allies, it cannot be with Germany. If it is for Germany, it will have to forego the benefits of Allied shipments. Spain's decision is different only in degree, not in kind, from the decision which many other governments will have to make as the climax of the war approaches; they will have to decide whether their post-war status will be that of nations which cooperated with the Allies or cooperated with Germany.

Neutrality in its highest form is at best a tenuous condition, frequently maintained by neutral concessions. The neutrality of Switzerland, Sweden, Eire and Trukey, though remaining intact so far, is not immune to some of the same challenges which, in the cases of Spain and Argentina, have precipitated showdowns. Pending the climax of the war with Germany and that government's final collapse, no neutral nation will care to ignore the extremely good reasons for making it known in advance that in sympathy, at least, it was aligned with the winning side.

In no way would the threat of strikes or the number of man-hours lost by strikes be lessened, nor would production be increased by a labor draft.—CIO Secretary-Treasurer James B. Carey.

THE STARS SAY:

For Tuesday, February 1

THE LUNAR and mutual aspects dominant on this day forecast a moderately progressive culmination if quick and determined action be brought to bear upon a surprise or unforeseen opening. But the move must be a quick and practical one, based upon sound business tactics as well as initiative and force. All constructive resources should be marshaled toward a successful end, and without excessive outlay of funds or energies or over enthusiasm of an impulsive or turbulent nature. Use the head rather than emotions, but don't be caught napping.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be ready for a year of moderate openings for placing the affairs on a constructive and enduring foundation. Initiative and quick action should be supported by sound fundamentals and not defeated by rash, extravagant or impulsive methods. Study details, organize for lasting and telling final issues, but on the way avoid pitfalls or intrigues. It would be wise to be ready for aggressive action when surprises occur, and not be swept off the feet by over-zeal and unpreparedness. Head work and not heart is recommended.

A child born on this day should have much practical skill with initiative and energy to attack good prospects with zeal and enthusiasm as well as fine organizing ability. Its danger might be in impetuosity.

HITLER CHANGES VIEW

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Adolf Hitler apparently has discarded the line he took a month ago—that the war will end without a victor—and returned to his old theme that only Soviet Russia or Nazi Germany can win the struggle.

In a grim New Year's message Dec. 31, the Nazi fuhrer asserted, "in this war there will be no victors and losers, but merely survivors and annihilated."

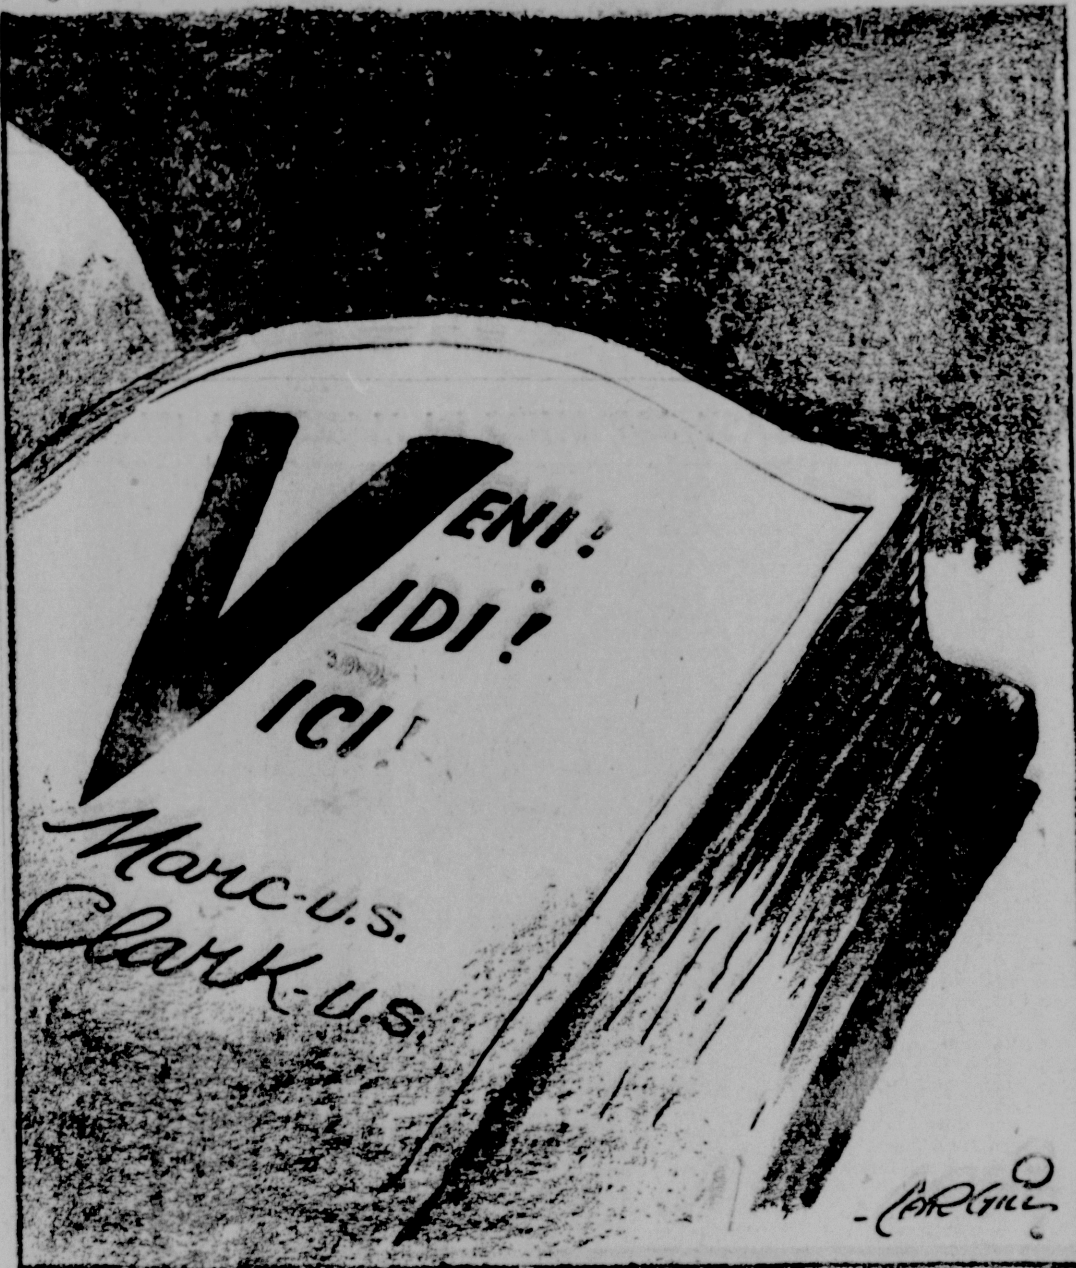

Yesterday, on the 11th anniversary of his rule, he declared, "from this fight can emerge only one victor, and this will be either Germany or Soviet Russia. A German victory means the preservation of Europe, and a Soviet victory Europe's annihilation."

Hitler declared high explosive and incendiary bombs, instead of bringing about Germany's collapse, "will create that hard state which has been slated by providence to shape European history during the coming centuries."

He said the question facing both England and the United States "no longer is whether they want or are able after this war to fight Bolshevism, but whether they will be able to defend themselves against Bolshevism in their own countries."

The time has arrived in this war when the home front must make a maximum effort surpassing anything we have thus far. We are undertaking the most difficult and ambitious military operations in history. The over-whelming success of the Fourth War Loan will serve as positive evidence to our enemy that their defeat is at hand.—Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff.

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

Gallbladder Can Be Troublemaker

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

RECENTLY we compared the gallbladder to one of those obstreperous relatives known to every household who is periodically making trouble, but at most times is doing something fairly useful.

The function of the gallbladder, we said, is to store bile until it is necessary to help out in digestion. Bile is a main factor in fat digestion and fat in a meal causes the gallbladder to empty.

Most of the time, however, the bile remains in stasis in the gallbladder and anything in Nature which is in stasis is a potential site of trouble. So the sluggish gallbladder may become infected and the infection may produce gallstones. These conditions show up the gallbladder in a less lively light—as a trouble maker.

Continuous Process

Gallbladder disease is a continuous process, but it may get sidetracked. It always starts with an infection and inflammation—the breeding of germs in the bile or in the wall of the gallbladder. It may stop there and cause just a mild dyspepsia sometimes not so mild. Or it may go on to gallstone formation. Or it may go on to pus formation—empyema of the gallbladder—a very serious condition indeed.

Gallstones are seldom stones. They are almost the consistency of putty, being made up of the deposit of the bile salts. So they do not throw a shadow on the x-ray plate as do kidney stones. Occasionally a calcium stone forms which does throw a shadow. Gallstones are of all kinds and may do all kinds of things. They may be big or little. If big they stay in the gallbladder and grind around causing discomfort in the pit of the stomach. If little they may try a journey down the gall ducts—which is gallstone colic, with pain reflected to the shoulder—no fun in any man's language. There may be one stone or five thousand.

Certain types of people are disposed to gallstones. The heavy set, broad type who has a good appetite and enjoys life is the ideal victim. The heavy meal that stays in the stomach a long time "like lead" tends to cause stasis in the gallbladder because it does not empty until food gets in the intestine.

This is a point in prevention. If a person avoids over-rich foods and conditions or habits that lead to disturbances of digestion, his chances of having gallstones will be diminished.

The treatment of gallbladder disease will depend on its severity and the possible dangers involved. The modern surgery of gallbladder disease is a brilliant chapter in treatment. It is a point in prevention. If a person avoids over-rich foods and conditions or habits that lead to disturbances of digestion, his chances of having gallstones will be diminished.

But most gallbladder troubles are so mild as hardly to indicate such measures. Remember fat—a tablespoonful of cream—will drain the gallbladder. And by the same token a fat meal will stir it up. A judicious use of diet may control this obstreperous member indefinitely.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

M. D.: Can you tell me what will dissolve wax in the ear? Have tried sweet oil, but that won't move it.

Answer: Wax in the ear often gets stony hard and attached to the skin. If simple home methods, like sweet oil, do not move it, this is a case for the doctor.

Mrs. H. K.: My dentist tells me I am bordering on pyorrhea and my gums are receding rapidly, but when I asked him how to prevent further receding he told me about the best method would be to tie a large stone around my neck and jump into the ocean.

Answer: Professional people often try to be smart by giving such answers. I presume everybody is nervous in wartime, but there is certainly no reason for such an answer. I would advise you to get another dentist because there are plenty of ways of holding back pyorrhea.

INSIDE—GRANGES OF GRANGES OF COUNTY ARRANGE PROGRAMS

One hundred and twenty-four officers of Columbiana county granges met at the Lisbon grange hall last week at the call of Norman Barnett, Elmore deputy, and Clarence Croser, Pomona master. The officers represented 14 of the 18 granges in the county.

After a general conference session, the masters met with Barnett for detailed instruction on their duties. The secretaries met with Evelyn Barnett for a discussion of their duties. The lecturers met with Mrs. Dan Allison to consider entertainment programs for the year.

Mrs. Roger Stafford led the discussion on home economics, and Mrs. Mildred Barnett conducted an interesting session with the leaders on juvenile grange. Each one of these five separate sessions reported back to the general conference and made suggestions for the future.

Each grange lecturer is including, at one or more of the grange meetings throughout the year, a discussion on safety.

At the request of Clarence Croser, the county safety committee was represented before the lecturer's group by James W. Pendry of the Soil Conservation service who discussed methods of including safety in all of the lecturer's programs. Each grange lecturer has been supplied, through Miss Emma Ramseyer, home extension agent, with a copy of this material which is available to all groups desiring to include safety as a feature of their program.

The following granges were reported at the conference: Pleasant Valley, Mt. Nebo, Mile Branch, Guilford, Butler, Salem, Midway, Fairfield, Lisbon, Perry, Willow Grove, Greeley, Unity, Yellow Creek, Calcutta, Clarkson, Bayard and Wayne.

LANSING, Mich.—The annual winter sale of confiscated and bountied furs netted the State Conservation Department's game protection fund $5,500. A single otter pelt brought the highest price—$1 the auction, going for $18. A total of 573 coyote pelts, 129 bobcats, 31 muskrats, 14 mink, 14 beaver, 3 raccoon, and five deer hides were auctioned.

The United States has 41 persons to the square mile.

THE LITTLE DOG BARKED by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER ELEVEN

The bath was nothing but a large closet, really. Windowless, but with a second door to the hall. And as I had no wish to suffocate my frisky canine friend I left this door open, and only closed the shutters attached to it for better ventilation, before I put down a quilt and invited Stray to make himself comfortable.

I had expected resistance, playful yet energetic. But to my surprise he lay down at once, thumping his tail as if to say, "This suits me fine," and settling himself to sleep, his cute black nose pressed against the shutter slats. And I went back to my room thankfully, changed the pillows to the foot of the bed to keep the lightning out of my eyes, lay down and tried to sleep.

Only I couldn't. The storm was too violent. I lay there, counting the seconds between the lightning flashes and the crackling thunder, watching the storm recede, come back, recede again—listening in each interval of silence for other sounds and hearing them.

Stray, protesting against his imprisonment? Footsteps in the hall? Or was it only the rain, a steady downpour now, on the porch roof, that sounded like footsteps?

I must have dropped off in the end, for I was dreaming—of an ugly, monkey-like creature, pounding a table and rasping, "Sabotage! I want sabotage, sabotage!" when I found myself sitting up in bed, in answer to a very real pounding on my door, and Linda's breathless entreaty: "Mrs. Turner! Mrs. Turner, please! There's someone downstairs!"

I snatched up my flashlight, threw on my robe and opened the door all in one motion.

Linda was standing in the hall, a flickering candle in her hand, her eyes huge and black with fear, and staking all over.

I thought at first it was the storm. A shutter, banging. She said in a scared whisper, "But it can't be. It's groans. Listen!"

I listened. And could hear nothing but the wind and rain and occasional thunder outside, and Stray growling menacingly in the bathroom. Either Linda's knocking had roused the small dog, or he too had heard something.

"Quiet, Stray!" admonished under my breath, and then followed Linda into her room when she said: "It's right underneath my room. You hear it better there?"

Again I heard nothing for a time. Half a minute possibly. And then, in the hush between thunders, I did: A strange, long-drawn moan ending in a bubbling sound. As if someone were gargling. It seemed to come up through the floor. And a moment later there was the distinct sound of a window being pushed up.

Both of us were at Linda's window in a jump. I, pushing the flashlight out between the two halves of the rusty, adjustable screen and directing it downward.

The noise of the window slamming down coincided with my action, and the next instant I picked out the figure of a man: tall, in a light suit, with his collar turned up and a visored cap pulled down over his ears.

His arms flew up, shielding his face, as the light struck him. He ducked and vanished in the night. I couldn't turn my flashlight quickly enough, hampered by the screen, to find him again. But I had made out that he hadn't run toward the theatre and the inn but toward the right, where the woods crowded our ramshackle shelter.

With his disappearance the stillness was complete again. There were no more groans downstairs. Even the storm had ceased. Abruptly, as if on a special signal.

I stared at Linda, speechless, and open-mouthed. And Linda stared back, in abject terror. Then, suddenly, there was a sound again. Stray. Not growling any longer. Howling. Piercingly—mournfully.

The eerie sound made things worse and yet broke the tension. "Of all the lowdown tricks! Sending a man here to frighten us! In the middle of a storm too!" I broke out furiously.

"You think they—they just wanted to scare us?" Linda tampered through chattering teeth.

"What else? Isn't that enough?" I challenged.

"I don't know. That men—maybe he was sent to—to k-kill—" The word ended in sheer fright.

"This wouldn't do. The girl was working herself up into hysterics. 'Snap out of it, Linda!' I said sharply, with an assurance I didn't feel. 'It's over. Whoever the man was, and whatever he meant to do—he's gone, and we must get some sleep. Come on. Let's go to my room. The bed in it's wide enough for a regiment.'"

Presently we were busy barricading ourselves. Pushing everything we could move in front of the door. And when we had done that, there still remained the problem of Stray. He kept on howling. Nothing I said or did, no amount of petting silenced him. He was shivering with terror, and the hair around his neck stuck up stiffly.

At last I became desperate. Picking Stray up, struggling and squirming, under one arm, and tucking his quilt under the other, I ventured into the dark corridor once more, pushing dog and quilt into a room far down on the other side of the hall, and raced back to the comparative safety of our furniture stronghold.

And then—after securing the bathroom door also—I lay awake. Washing myself thousands of miles away, with Lee, in South America. Feeling I must protect Linda. Promising myself a talk—and what a talk!—with Linwood in the morning. Straining my ears for a repetition of the groans, the possible return of the intruder.

But nothing happened. There was only the drowsy gurgling of water in the gutters of the porch roof, now and then the heavy "plop" of a big rain drop, weighted with calcimine, splashing down from the leak in the corner of the ceiling. And, very faintly—perhaps I only imagined it—Stray's muffled howling.

My traveling alarm clock woke us at seven-thirty, all too soon. We tumbled out of bed, exchanged sleepily good mornings—after which Linda went to her room to dress while I took an icy, and somewhat rusty, shower to shock myself fully awake. Soon we were wading through the wet ferns, both in slacks and sweaters, and drenched to the knees by the time we'd gained the road.

The morning was perfect. Sunny and bright, with the sky far off and pale blue, and every leaf sparkling, washed clean by the rain. Altogether the world looked so serene and peaceful, last night's dark adventure seemed fantastic, a nightmare one didn't care to talk about.

H. G. Wells Fears Threat Of Big Business After War

NEW YORK, Jan. 31—H. G. Wells, British author and historian, objects to Russia, Britain and the United States attempting to control the world after the war, and asserts "big business grabbing may destroy what is left of our world."

His views were contained in a symposium on post-war treatment of Germany in the trans-Atlantic edition of the London Daily Mail published in New York today.

Wells wrote, "this group of powers has no right whatever to usurp the government of the world. I question whether the masses of people under their control desire anything of the sort."

Great Cement Grain Silos of Argentine Built Underground

By STANLEY L. SEFTON United Press Correspondent

BUENOS AIRES—Argentina will soon possess underground silos capable of holding for storage 1,000,000 tons of grain of all kinds. Following experiments by the ministry of agriculture of this country relative to the storing of cereals, it has been confirmed that the lowest percentages of losses occurring during a long-time holding of wheat, maize, etc., has been obtained by their being stored in underground granaries built of cement.

The actual users of the new silos will be the National Grain Board, which will utilize them for storing the grain bought by the government from the growers until such time as it is sold for exportation or placed on the market for local consumption. Towards this end, the Ministry of Agriculture has issued a decree authorizing the Grain Board to invest nearly $2,000,000 in the building of the silos, the renting or purchase of suitable localities situated throughout the country, and the control and inspection of the work to be carried out.

Funds Appropriated A further $1,500,000 also was voted to cover the cost of collecting the grains, cartage to the silos, and any possible drop in price suffered by the cereals while being held in stock.

The choice of sites for the new granaries and the specifications under which they will be constructed will be controlled by a commission which will include representatives of the Ministries of Agriculture and Public Works, the Commission for the Construction of Grain Elevators, and the National Grain Board.

In addition to the fact that cement underground silos have been proved to have reduced the loss of the stored grains, caused by adverse weather conditions and other factors, to a minimum as compared with that suffered by cereals stored in above-ground grain deposits, another advantage is that in the subterranean silos the grains may be held in bulk without the use of sacks. Due to the present shortage in Argentina of hemp for the manufacture of these, this is a point of great importance and an excellent solution to a problem which has vexed the agricultural authorities here since the start of the present war.

Besides the greater technical guarantees for the protection of the grains obtained by the use of underground deposits built of cement, it has been pointed out that construction of this kind can be used continuously over a long period of time so that savings registered by the reduction in the losses of the cereals, as experienced up to the present, will work towards an amortization of the initial cost of the new silos.

Although the underground deposits will be used in the main for the storage and protection of wheat they will be employed to shelter other grains as the need and opportunity occurs.

Salona Can Help Victory Gardeners

Although it hasn't been so long since the gardeners hung up the bug exterminators and the hose, and went into retirement to enjoy the fruits and vegetables of their labors, it is only "three whoops and a holler" until they will have to start all over again.

We are reminded of this fact by reports from the Salona Supply Co. on W. Pershing st., who are selling more than the usual amount of fruit spraying materials and sprayers right now so that certain scab and other destroyers of fruit never will have a chance to even start their dirty work. Some gardeners have been buying spading forks with the idea in mind of turning over their ground the very first day possible.

Last year's gardening was a new venture for a great many. They learned many valuable lessons the hard way, that is by personal experience. Often they found that their soil was not adapted for certain plants, while others thrived. So they will approach their projects this year with more confidence and a better knowledge of what they can do.

Anything you will need the Salona Supply Co. has in its hardware department. If you get them now your time will be saved for the garden work and too you will not be disappointed in wanting something that is sold out. Seeds will be available in plenty of time, the Holmes Line that has proven so successful in this section will be sold in bulk as in the past a method that saves you a considerable.

Flowers for Most Any Occasion

It's a few days early to be sending valentines but the windows and store trimmings are displaying the valentine idea in many ways. You could hardly think of Valentine day without thinking of flowers but why is it necessary to wait for any special occasion to send flowers, the good wife, your sweetheart and certainly mother and sister would appreciate them even more if anything if received on just any day.

To be real serious what could you send home that would surprise and loved one more than a beautiful potted plant in full bloom or cut flowers for the vase, or a table decoration? How could you spend the little it would cost to buy so much happiness in any other way? Flowers are like her eyes they make no sound but say so much.

The most dismal weeks of winter are just ahead, nature has become gray and dirty there just isn't anything that looks fresh, radiant and gay but thanks to such firms as the Endres and Gross Florists nature's spring brightness and all its glory is made to unfold at every season by providing the climatic conditions necessary to growth, and but unusual care and knowledge conditions are maintained that is conducive to finer blooms and more luxuriant growth than nature provides.

Goat "Gold" Makes Goats Of Hunters Out In Idaho

SALMON, Idaho — There aren't any dentists working the Salmon river uplands in Idaho's primitive area, but nevertheless more than a few wild goats have "gold" teeth. Exhaustive examinations of the rugged country have been launched because taxidermists claimed they found flakes of "gold" embedded in teeth of wild goats brought in to be stuffed, but there have been no bonanzas.

Frank Keefe, taxidermist, says it's only fool's gold. Once he retrieved metallic flakes from the hairs of a mountain goat, Keefe related, but a forest ranger told him the substance was mica, explaining there are whole mountains of the gold-like ore in the Salmon river country.

He scored a 314 out of a possible 340. The course record there is 325 and 306 is considered an expert.

Quakers Will Play Alliance And East Liverpool This Week

VISIT ALLIANCE ON TUESDAY, ENTERTAIN POTTERS ON FRIDAY

Hold Slight Edge Over Aviators: Fans Expected to Jam Gymnasium Friday

Two headliners in one week—that is the task nearly laid out for Herb Brown's Quaker quintet as they travel to Alliance tomorrow night to meet Jerry Mosher's Aviator squad and then return to their own gym Friday to tussle with the East Liverpool Potters.

Both games are return engagements in home-and-home series, Salem winning from Alliance here a month ago, 36-34, and dropping a mighty close one in the last two minutes at East Liverpool, 43-37, a week later. The Alliance game will be played in the Mount Union field house.

If ever a golden opportunity presented itself to a Salem team—this is it. A victory over either Alliance or East Liverpool is always a choice bit for Salem followers, but the Quakers are handed the chance to achieve both victories in the short space of four days.

Alliance Loses Two Players
The prospects for notching the first victory in the unusual combination are good—much better than they were when the Quakers first met the Alliance squad this season.

Coach Mosher is facing the problem of rejuvenating his slightly riddled squad, two men being whisked away by mid-year graduation. Walter Wollam, veteran guard, graduated Friday and took with him another teammate, Jim Talaba, who has been used as a substitute.

Mosher expects to start Albert Moyer in Wollam's spot at guard, and also plans to use dusky Don Snodgrass and Dick Sakett intermittently throughout the fray. His other three lettermen, Frank Rodgers, Kenny Chapman, and Jack Robinson will be in forward, center, and guard assignments respectively. Bill Sudeck, sharpshooting forward, who collected half the 34 Alliance points in the game here, will be in at his regular spot. Sudeck is not a letterman.

This weakened aggregation will place the Alliance squad just a little under the Quakers in rating, and together with the fact that Salem downed them once before, Alliance will be the underdog in the tussle. Both teams have equal standing in wins and losses, Alliance losing half of the 12 games and Salem dropping five of their 10 regular games.

Aviators Box To Warren
Since they lost here bringing their record to four wins and two losses, the Aviators have topped Barborton and Uhrichsville, while losing to Massillon, Youngstown South, Canton St. John and Warren. The Warren loss 38-25, gives fans a view of their might as compared to Salem in their 43-37 loss to the Harding Presidents. This slight difference in pointage gives Salem an added edge over the Aviators in pre-game ratings.

Both teams have suffered three game losing streaks, and the Alliance crew has been beaten one more time and won one more time than Salem. The floor on which the tussle is to take place is a large one, and if anything, should improve the play of the Quakers, who haven't enough space on their own floor to function properly. Alliance, though used to the gym, shouldn't garner any advantage over Salem in that respect.

Coach Brown and his squad are practicing on the large Leetonia floor tonight against James McBride's team in a further effort to develop their effectiveness under roomier conditions. Brown hasn't definitely announced his starting lineup, but the squad will be back to full strength this week. Ray, having re-entered the Salem High to finish the year. There is a possibility that Charles Mutt' Schaefer will be in the starting group in place of Norman Smith.

E. Liverpool Strong
The Quaker's second opponent this week, East Liverpool, has been doing quite well since Salem played there three weeks ago. The Potters are now riding along with a record of eight wins and two losses, and are picked to make it nine wins before coming here Friday.

They meet Midland, Pa., on the Liverpool floor Tuesday and will be seeking their second win already boasting a 58 to 31 victory over Midland earlier in the season.

Faculty Manager Fred Cope announced that plenty of good seats are still available for the Liverpool game, but advises early purchases. The largest crowd of the season is expected Friday.

Springfield, Zanesville To Enter Class D League

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, Jan. 31.—Springfield and Zanesville had permission today to enter the Class D Ohio State basketball league which is to be organized here Feb. 13.

President Elmer Daley of the Middle-Atlantic basketball league announced at Pittsburgh yesterday that franchise holders had agreed the two cities could play in the Buckeye loop since the Mid-A, with which they are affiliated, did not plan to resume operations this year.

This action made it possible to plan for competition among at least six clubs, the other members being Lima, Middletown, Newark and Marion.

Woman suffrage was granted in New Zealand 50 years ago.

5 OHIO COLLEGES LOSE AAF COURSES

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—The Army Air Forces will return to civilian users 70 colleges—among them five in Ohio—utilized in the college training program and 14 civilian schools from the pilot training program.

The Ohio schools are Fenn college, Hiram, Marietta college, University of Akron, and Western Reserve university.

The War department announcement said students now training in the 70 schools would complete their courses but that no new Army Air Forces students would be accepted for training there.

The department said the move was in conformance with Gen. H. H. Arnold's report that as the war progresses stress would be placed on training replacements.

The AAF announced the change did not in any manner reflect "dissatisfaction relative to the performance of the school."

High-Octane Gas Playing Potent Part In Allies' Air Battles With the Enemy

By HERMAN R. ALLEN

WASHINGTON, D. C.—When the shooting is over, it is not unlikely that a big share of the victory credit will go to something about which so little is known that it's almost a "secret weapon."

It is 100-octane gasoline.

Some idea of the potent part this high-powered motor fuel has played in the war may be gained from this statement of Geoffrey Lloyd, Great Britain's petroleum secretary: "I think we wouldn't have won the Battle of Britain without 100-octane gasoline—but we did have 100-octane gasoline."

Much of that 100-octane was taken over in tankers from the first two American refineries.

Nazis Lack Refineries

Examination of captured German supplies shows that the Nazis have something approximating 100-octane too, but petroleum experts here do not believe Germany has sufficient refining capacity to supply it even for all her fighter planes—much less bombers. All Allied combat planes fly on 100-octane.

It is believed the Germans have designed their engines to take best advantage of the gasoline they have (much of it is made from coal), but general performance of their motors does not come up to ours.

Just what is 100-octane gasoline? During experimentation on high-power, no-knock fuels, Dr. Graham Edgar, a Detroit chemist, discovered that one of the substances in petroleum, called iso-octane, could be used as a fuel itself and would not knock in the highest-compression motors then in existence. He also discovered that another component of petroleum, normal heptane, would knock under almost any conditions when used alone as a fuel.

So he and his helpers set up a scale on which zero-octane represented pure heptane and 100-octane pure iso-octane. A fuel of 75-octane rating would be one with characteristics similar to a mixture of 75 per cent iso-octane and 25 per cent heptane.

First Was Costly

But iso-octane cost about $30 a gallon—too much for practical use—so Dr. Edgar continued trying to raise ordinary fuel to iso-octane standard.

He had begun his efforts in 1918. Automotive engineers were trying to increase the power of engines by compressing the air-gasoline mixture into a smaller cylinder head space, but they found that the gasoline of that day would "knock," causing the engine to overheat and lose power.

In 1922, after countless experiments, Dr. Edgar discovered that the addition of a minute quantity of tetraethyl lead to gasoline made from selected crude oils would raise that gasoline to 87-octane. However, the process worked only up to that point; adding still more "ethyl fluid" didn't have enough more effect to be worth while.

Then scientists found that the higher the "base stock" octane rating, the higher the rating would be when the lead compound was added. The problem thus switched to one of raising the base stock rating. This was accomplished by experiments which resulted in producing iso-butane at a much lower price by the "hydrogenation" process, which was imported, incidentally, from Germany.

New Fuel Too Potent

By 1934, 100-octane gasoline was being made by adding iso-octane to high-test gas, then adding tetraethyl. Actually the new fuel was too potent for the highest-compression aviation engine then in existence, but engine designers soon caught up with it and in 1935 the Army ordered 100,000 gallons and later 1,000,000 gallons—at about $2 a gallon. The price is now down to less than 15 cents.

In 1940 American refineries were turning out 30,000 barrels of 100-octane a day. When the Japs struck Pearl Harbor they were making 46,000 barrels a day. Overnight it became necessary to expand production to almost inconceivable volume. Petroleum technicians came to bat with new processes (many of them still secret), built new refineries "out of a hat" and—perhaps most startling of all—found out how to get 4.2 gallons of 100-octane out of every barrel of crude oil where before they had been getting only 2 1/2 gallons.

Exact production figures are kept dark, but it can be said that the output is now more than four times what it was Dec. 7, 1941, and that within a few months it will be eight times greater.

No wonder Hitler the Hun is frightened, but he chose a particularly inopportune moment to try to win Allied support or cause a rupture. Both America and England have been aroused to utter fury by the disclosure of the barbaric atrocities on American, British and Filipino prisoners of war by his barbaric Jap allies. We have full proof that Nazidom is no less savage, though possibly not quite so sadistically crude in its tortures. We're not helping preserve Hitler's "civilization" for Europe.

Shell Turtle Aids 'Fire-Stream' Design Of Newest Tanks

(By United Press) DETROIT — The horny-shelled turtle doesn't know it, but he's partly responsible for good ballistics designs in modern military vehicles, especially tanks.

George W. Walker, noted Detroit industrial designer and consultant to the Army ordnance department's design division, says military today is conscious of silhouette just as automobile manufacturers became aware of it more than a decade ago.

Streamlining of military vehicles facilitates smooth air flow and "fire-streaming"—strengthening armor to keep step with increasing fire power—enables them to withstand the enemy's heaviest blows.

"We remember the early automobiles with their verticle windshields and we have seen how these have given away to profiles offering a minimum of wind resistance," said Walker.

"So also our earlier tanks presented their upright, armored surfaces to direct impact."

"Good ballistics design," the turtle has it—thus sheds missiles as effectively as "functional design," applied to the family automobile body, sheds the invisible, but very real barrier of air," he explained.

Walker, who crayon design, everything from tiny watches to giant vehicles and airplanes, says the slope of the modern tank's armor "at all points must provide obliquity, in order that shells will ricochet harmlessly or with minimum of damage."

Although streamlining is important to all vehicles, Walker and his collaborator, Capt. A. C. Radebaugh of the ordnance department, believe "fire-streaming" is even more vital.

"The automobile, for example, has merely the wind of its passage to face," Radebaugh said. "A tank, however, moves into the deadly hail of enemy fire and so must be what we call 'fire-streamed'."
